

School Equality scenarios

In the Summer term the school says that girls must wear dresses and boys must wear shorts. One girl decides to wear shorts to school because she hates dresses. Some of the other pupils laugh at her and the teacher says that she needs to wear a dress tomorrow.

Year 6 decided to have their leaving party in the top hall, which is upstairs. One pupil uses a wheelchair and there is no lift so they won't be able to go to the party.

Corey lives with his two mums but feels embarrassed to talk about it in class because some pupils have made rude comments about LGBTQ people. Also, none of the books at school have LGBTQ families in them so the teachers never talk about it.

My uncle is trans and sometimes he drops me off at school. My friends are nice but ask me loads of personal questions about him and say things like 'it must be weird having a trans uncle'. I don't think they even know what trans means because the teachers never talk about it

Someone made a racist comment about Shay in the classroom. She is sure that her friends heard but they pretended not to. Shay told the teacher and the teacher told her just to ignore it.

People in my class at school have been laughing at me because they say my religion is not real and I have just made it up. We have learnt about all the other religions in RE but not mine yet.
